During the 1990s, the number of people who have been infected with HIV has increased significantly. In 1990, there were approximately 1.5 million people living with HIV. By 2000, this number had risen to over 40 million. The World Health Organization (WHO) estimates that there are now over 40 million people living with HIV worldwide. This is a significant increase from the 1990s, when the number of people living with HIV was around 1.5 million. The increase in the number of people living with HIV is due to a combination of factors, including the spread of the virus through sexual contact, blood transfusions, and mother-to-child transmission.
